ABSTRACT

With the liberalization and globalization of the economy and the removal of quantitative restrictions, the smaller units of the village industry sector are facing stiff competition. A large portion of India's population lives in the villages where illiteracy still prevails and large industry is not in a position to absorb the work force from rural areas. In view of this, it is necessary to create more employment opportunities in villages by utilizing local resources and skills so that rural people can get work in the villages itself.

In this paper we have studied the operational performance of village industries in the Osmanabad district. We also focused on the various schemes implemented by the government and other agencies for the development of the village industry in the district.
