ABSTRACT:

Industrialization is a process by which a society or a country transforms itself from a primarily agricultural society into one that is based on the manufacturing of goods and services. During the process industrialization there has been structural changes in the families around the world. Based on the data collected by the author during 2011-2012 on an ICSSR funded project the paper argues that industrialization process has changed the structure of the families particularly to those who has been evicted due to industrialization. This change occurred unevenly and gradually, and varied by social class and occupation.

KEY WORDS: Changes, family structure, industrialization, mobility.
