ABSTRACT:

Now it has been a well accepted thought that a country that wants to be superpower must be developed first. It should have a clear cut vision statement about the empowerment of its all segment of society and culture i.e. inclusive growth. It must stir the plans and policies for the sustainable uses of its natural and created resources to uplift its deprived and weaker section and to set a legitimate and moral harmony among the different sectors of socio-economic environment. The present work is about the pavement and process of establishing our country as a developed nation. How should we coordinate among different segments i.e. social, political, economical, technological, and natural? It is an effort to identify the potential threats and weaknesses to find out possible and efficient ways to transform it in strength and opportunity. It also defines the present status and potentials of various sectors (especially the infrastructure development, education & literacy, and healthcare issues) of our socio-economic panorama with in-depth findings and suggestions.

KEYWORDS: inclusive growth, society, culture, political.
