ABSTRACT
Although it is too early to evaluate the long run socio-economic impingements of post 2015 Development Agenda on a dualistic economy like India. The new sustainable development Agenda seeks to ensure that the momentum generated by the Millennium Development Goals is carried forward beyond 2015-to achieve sustainable reductions in poverty, hunger and other deprivations viz-a-viz a life of dignity to all. Building on the MDGs, the SDGs propose to end poverty and deprivations, while making development economically, socially and environmentally sustainable. India has made notable progress towards reaching the MDGs but achievement across the goals varies. India has achieved the poverty reduction target, but progress is uneven.

KEY WORDS: Sustainable Development Goals, deprivations, impingements, Development Agenda.
